Pet insurance is not just for emergencies. Along with emergencies, pet insurance companies will often cover the costs of routine, preventative care. This includes yearly visits, vaccines, and routine check-ups with your family veterinarian.

Your pet may be predisposed to hereditary conditions. Whether it's your Cavalier King Charles Spaniel in need of an echocardiogram, a German Shepherd in need of a TPLO, or a feline in need of an abdominal ultrasound, pet insurance will cover a vast majority of specialized procedures.

Young or adult pets are eligible - and can benefit from - pet insurance.

Veterinary care for senior pets is critical, as pets are more likely to develop illnesses as they age. Many pet insurance companies will not deny your senior pet coverage.

Accidents happen. When the unexpected occurs, pet insurance will cover the majority of the bills you were unprepared for. Pet insurance will not reimburse you for pre-existing conditions, which is why having a pet insurance policy in place before your pet gets ill is important.
